Doubt raised about students grading tests

Some University civil service employees question whether student workers should grade the essay section of the exam which determines hiring, firing and promotion of civil service workers.

Hiring students to grade tests has been a "hot spot" because test scores "affect people's livelihood," said Deborah Lindrud, director of employment services.

The University hires four student workers and three civil service supervisors on a regular basis to grade civil service exams. Lindrud said Employment Services hires students only because federal funding is available to pay them.

Other Illinois state universities, except Sangamon State University, do not hire student workers regularly to grade exams, and only the University of Illinois hires students for peak testing periods.

Lindrud said students are capable of grading the essay part of the exam because the questions are "objective," and its only purpose is to find out what experience applicants have relating to jobs they want.

But former civil service employee Cynthia Miller said the exam questions were evaluative in terms of experience, and said she feels that students are not qualified to grade that section unless they've had experience or background in that area.

Sharon Grissom, a staff stenographer, also questioned the grading procedures after being told that students graded the exams. Grissom, who received a score of 98 out of 100 on the test, said she nearly lost a promotion because of a two-point deduction on the essay part.

She said students come and go so quickly that they don't have enough time to learn the system.

After an audit of Employment Services conducted in 1983, State Universities Civil Service System personnel voiced con-

Local GOP delegates prefer unity to excitement

By Jane Grandolfo
Staff Writer

With no challengers to either President Reagan or Vice President Bush, the Republican National Convention may be dull — but Southern Illinois delegates say they'll take the unity over excitement any day.

Joe Hale, a 22nd District Republican delegate from Shawneetown said that as a party loyalist, he prefers the solidarity predicted for the upcoming convention. "It won't get your adrenaline up as much, but it is much more of a unified experience."

Hale, Republican State Central Committeeman for 18 years, added that last month's Democratic National Convention will be a tough act to follow. "It had so many superstars all vying for positions." The GOP event "will be like a church picnic" by comparison, he said.

Other delegates from the 22nd Congressional District share Hale's sentiments. Two of them, Viola Prineas and Rose Vieth, both of Carbondale, agree that the GOP convention may pale in comparison to the recent "hooplah" of the Democratic convention.

"Let's face it, Jesse (Jackson), (Gary) Hart and (Walter) Mondale are all outspoken and very colorful people," Prineas said. "I'm expecting this to be very dignified." Vieth says she expects things to be "very cut and dried," without much fuss.

The GOP convention, which opens Monday in Dallas, has Republican party leaders wondering how to hold public interest. Plans include streamlining the convention by eliminating many lengthy speeches and renominating Reagan and Bush on the same night, instead of on consecutive evenings.

U.S. Treasurer Katherine D. Ortega, a Hispanic and the second woman treasurer in U.S. history, will be the keynote speaker Monday night, Hale said. Other speakers include United Nations Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick, Senate

Gus Bode

Gus says the only challenge Ron will have at the convention is staying awake until he gives his acceptance speech.

Majority Leader Howard Baker and the Rev. Jerry Falwell, head of the Moral Majority, will give the benediction closing the Wednesday session.

Hale said a potential break in GOP unity could be the issue of whether and how to raise taxes.

"How the plank will be handled with respect to increased taxes may result in a little bit of a division and a possible floor fight," he said.

Reagan and Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale have been at odds over the tax issue. Mondale has maintained that Reagan will increase taxes after the November election, while Reagan has said he will raise taxes only as a last resort.

Other key issues of the 1984 GOP platform include employment, interest rates, U.S. involvement in Central America and defense, Hale said. Hale said opponents of Reagan's stance on nuclear arms control have given him a "bum rap."

Arena playing fields to be repaired

The Arena playing fields will be off-limits this semester so that general repairs and maintenance can be made on the fields.

That kind of work hasn't been done to the Arena fields for about 20 years, said Bill McMinn, coordinator of intramural sports. The planned repairs include reseeded, fertilizing, turning the soil to expose it to air, and filling in the holes in the fields.

Weeds have overgrown the fields, McMinn said.

While the fields are being repaired, intramural sports such as softball, will use the four fields across from the Recreation Center and the two upper fields near the Arena. Most of the repairs will be made on the fields located on the low lying land adjacent to the tennis courts.

"We're not keeping people off to give them a hard time," McMinn said. "We're doing it to give the fields time to heal."

Complaints about the poor condition of the fields have been received by McMinn's office and he said that this would be a good time to get the work done. "I'm sure a good number of the injuries we have in intramurals are due to the bad field conditions," McMinn said.

If the work proceeds on schedule, the fields will be ready for use again by next semester, McMinn said.

"With a little help from some rain," he added.

Board undecided about replacing Johns

By Jane Grandolfo
Staff Writer

The Illinois Board of Elections is still trying to decide how candidates will be selected to go on November ballot for the 59th District state Senate seat vacated by the death of Gene Johns.

Kel Hudson, associate director of the IBE, said the procedure for filling the vacancy will be final Monday.

Johns had served about half of his four-year term, leaving 59th District Democratic leaders the task of appointing an interim senator and finding a candidate for the November ballot.

State Rep. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, and Yvonne Johns, Sen. Johns' wife, topped the list of possible Democratic nominees to fill the seat.

Rea said he received numerous calls from citizens and Democratic Party chairmen asking him to run for the office, but he hadn't made a decision to accept the offer. He planned to make a decision by Monday.

Mrs. Johns has declared her intent to run for her late husband's Senate seat.

"I have let it be known that I'm interested in running for both the interim session and for the election in November," she said.

Rea said his decision rests on whether he receives the interim appointment.

"I think the interim appointee and the person on the ballot should be the same person," he said. "That's the only way I would accept the nomination."

Rea said he feels more qualified than Mrs. Johns to fill the seat.

"If it's between the two of us, with all my experience, I doubt Yvonne will be appointed," he said. "The people are concerned about finding someone who will be around for a while and who has the experience."

Mrs. Johns said she didn't know anything about Rea's possible nomination and she doubted if it would be a source of conflict for the party.

Republican Party leaders have been searching for an opponent to run in the general election in November.

Homer Askew, Williamson County Republican chairman, said possible Republican contenders include Rep. Robert Winchester, of Rosiclare; Wade Hudgens, of Goreville; and Ronald Summers, Franklin County chairman.

Askew said other possibilities include Mike Moorman, Massac

County chairman, and Robert Connell, a former opponent of Rea's for the 117th District seat. The GOP county chairmen planned to meet Saturday morning at the Marion Holiday Inn to choose a candidate.

Democratic county chairmen had planned to meet Sunday in Marion to form a legislative search committee to find a replacement for Johns.

Johns held the 59th District Senate seat since 1970. He died Aug. 11 at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

The 56-year-old SIU graduate had suffered from cancer for several years. The son of a Southern Illinois coal miner, Johns had supported the coal mining industry, earning him the reputation of "The Coal Miner's Senator."

distribution site on a city parking lot north of the pedestrian overpass, some confusion arose over whether refunds would be given.

STUDENTS COMPLAINED to the University Housing Office that a phone number they were given to call in DeKalb for refunds was an answering machine.

Baker said he spent most of Thursday talking with his attorney, and other workers did not know what to do with the refund requests. On Friday, refund requests were accepted if the student explained the reason for return, Baker said, and the refrigerators were then offered for sale at reduced prices.

Baker said he has been unable to get the contract with the University for residence hall refrigerators.

"Our experience with bidding is that the local company always wins, even if we underbid," he said. "Most universities are not required to take the lowest bid."

ANY EXCLUSIVE contract, however, Baker said, should not be allowed.

"To me, it's not that we're cheaper. To me, it is a matter of freedom of choice," he said.

Baker said he has fought similar contracts at other universities, such as Northern Illinois University, and won. He filed suit against Iowa State University because of an exclusive contract. After two years in court, the university dropped the contract and allowed competitive renting, he said.

Baker said he is taking the situation "day by day," but that he would not rule out going to court over it.

"I'D GO that far anywhere. I believe in free enterprise and the court system," he said.

In similar situations, university officials are usually "embarrassed and feel there shouldn't be a contract" when Baker complains about the restrictive nature of the contracts, he said. "Here, we're not sure."

Baker said that he hasn't spoken with the University's attorneys about the contract. He said that although he knew it existed before he came to Carbondale, he did not know the extent to which it would be enforced. Similar contracts at other universities have been loosely enforced, he said.

Baker questioned how the officials would determine which units in the residence hall rooms were rented and which were owned, saying that the officials don't have the right to seize personal property or ask for proof of ownership.

Liquor board to hear entry age plan

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

In an effort to control underage drinking in Carbondale, Police Chief Ed Hogan has proposed an ordinance that would prohibit people under 21 from entering establishments selling liquor.

The Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board has scheduled a public hearing on the proposal Sept. 4. The board has delayed action to allow for student opinion.

"Something must be done to impell liquor license holders to be more respective of the law," Hogan said.

He said random checks of Carbondale bars by police between January 1980 and April 1984 resulted in 412 underage drinking arrests.

"If we checked every night, the number would be quadrupled," he said.

Three bars — T.J.'s Watering Hole, the American Tap 1902 and Gatsby's — accounted for about 75 percent of underage drinking violations.

Hogan said that when the Illinois drinking age for beer and wine was raised from 19 to 21 in 1979, the city agreed to let bar owners police their own businesses. Carbondale does not have an entry age requirement. Bar entry is governed by house rules of individual bars.

However, he said "passive resistance" to the state drinking age law by bar owners has necessitated stronger measures.

Some owners of liquor establishments in Carbondale have expressed opposition to the proposal.

"Most of us are trying to do a good job," said Harry Kirk, one of the owners of T.J.'s Watering Hole.

Although T.J.'s has had a large number of arrests for underage drinking — 165 — Kirk said T.J.'s is an "entertainment establishment."

He said his business would be hampered by the 21-year-old entry requirement because many young students are drawn to T.J.'s for the dancing and live bands.

He predicted that if the ordinance is passed by the City Council, the increased number of keg parties will cause disruption in Carbondale neighborhoods.

However, Hogan said police already have a problem with neighborhood keg parties and whether the ordinance would make the situation worse cannot be predicted.

Establishments, such as restaurants, that serve liquor but derive 60 percent of business from food sales would be exempt from the ordinance.

Liquor license holders also claim the proposal goes too far by punishing everybody. Class A liquor licenses in Carbondale do not distinguish between package goods stores and bars. The proposed ordinance would prohibit people under 21 from entering liquor stores even if they do not purchase liquor.

Doug Diggle, manager of Old Town Liquors, said people under 21 who now come into his store to buy such items as cigarettes, bread and milk would be prohibited.

Diggle said more rigorous enforcement of the drinking age laws, coupled with fines and temporarily closing bars that serve underage patrons, is a better solution to the problem.

Downtown plans progressing, but snags remain

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

Plans for Carbondale's long-awaited hotel-conference center seem to be progressing, although several questions involving financing, feasibility and location have yet to be resolved.

At its last meeting, held Aug.

6, the City Council agreed to a request made by the proposed center's developer, Stan Hoyer.

The request allows City Manager Bill Dixon to inform the Farmer's Home Administration that the city would conditionally guarantee $4.55 million in bonds for the $14 million project provided five stipulations are met.

The stipulations include an FmHA guarantee of an extension of bonds up to the amount of $9.45 million which the agency had issued for the project once before but dropped because of problems in acquiring downtown properties.

The council said that the city and Hoyer must be satisfied with agreements concerning the first issuance of bonds, and with resolution of any problems from recently passed legislation which may have an impact on the tax-exempt status of the bonds.

Another requirement of the council's conditional agreement is that a feasibility study be conducted by the St. Louis branch of the Lavenhol and Horwath accounting firm at the city's expense prove that the project is in the city's economic interest.

The possibility of moving the center back to the 300 block of South Illinois Avenue, where it was originally to be built, has also surfaced in recent discussions.

Tax disclosure woes

THE FIRST female vice-presidential candidate of a major party is finding out that national politics is a game of hardball. And so is her husband John Zaccaro.

There has been much uproar about Zaccaro not disclosing his tax returns. Under law he is not required to do so. However, if Rep. Geraldine Ferraro received any financial gain from her husband's business, she must file that with the Federal Elections Commission. At the Democratic National Convention last month, she said she would release all of her financial statements. She has yet to do so, but says that she will Monday.

So far, Republicans have been pushing for the disclosure of Zaccaro's financial records. That is their privilege. This helps keep elected officials honest. If the public is stirred up enough about Zaccaro's finances, which it seems to be, he is likely to give in to public pressure. He is showing signs of doing so, as he is reconsidering withholding his tax returns. Ferraro aides say that if her husband does release the statements, it will be sometime this week.

AS A MEMBER of Congress, Ferraro exempted her husband's financial statements even though she's an officer of his real estate company. In addition, the New York Times reported she has a Congressional office in a building owned by Zaccaro's company. The Times also reported that Ferraro has been involved in real estate transactions with Zaccaro's companies and other mixing of financial activities, such as a joint mortgage to purchase a $200,000 condominium in the Virgin Islands.

Ferraro isn't the only vice-presidential candidate having problems with financial statements. Vice President George Bush won't release his own tax returns, but says Zaccaro should. Bush said he released tax returns in 1980 dating back six years, and after taking office put his assets into a blind trust which is managed by a trustee. Investments are kept secret from Bush. He said that if he releases tax information, it breaks the blind trust.

Bush said that in order to have that information released, permission is required from the Government Ethics Office. However, some Republican leaders have called upon Bush to release his tax returns.

BUT IF IT becomes necessary for spouses of candidates to release financial statements, then down the line it could extend to parents, brothers, sisters, cousins and children. Any of them could be used to hide an official's income and financial dealings. Where would it end? Would it then become too complex and too much for the public to piece together?

Zaccaro says he doesn't want to hurt his wife — which it seems he is now doing. While he isn't required by law to disclose anything, questions and accusations are mounting.

Since this whole affair is growing at a rate of the speed of sound — it probably won't be long before the press names it Husbandgate — Zaccaro would be helping the Mondale-Ferraro ticket by disclosing his tax returns.

If Zaccaro doesn't, then the Democratic ticket may be penalized in this game of political hardball.

Letters

Bible says men and women are equal

The exchange of letters during the summer concerning the portrayal and role of women in the Bible missed two important points.

First, the Old Testament is not the place to find the biblical teaching on women. Jesus taught that he fulfilled and transcended the law "unless your righteousness exceeds that of the Scribes and Pharisees." He demanded a relationship with God and an ethic toward humankind that fulfilled and went far beyond the law (see the early parts of the Sermon on the Mount).

Paul compared the law to a tutor that prepares a child for the real master teacher. When ready, the child no longer needs the tutor. When the law fulfilled its function, Jesus came to reveal the full truth.

The writer of Hebrews uses a Platonic image, that of physical existence as a shadow of the real world, which is transcendental and spiritual, when he states that the law was merely shadow. When Jesus, the real, came, what further need was there for the incomplete copy that was the law? We must look to the teaching of Jesus and its explanation in the New Testament to understand the true Biblical doctrine on any matter.

The second point has to do with women specifically. The law gave regulations that protected women and elevated their status more than had previously been the case. It is in this light that the law must be interpreted. The teaching and practice of Jesus, and the statements of principle in Paul's letters make it abundantly clear that to God there is no difference between male and female. He honors and loves both equally, and calls both equally to a right relationship with him. In sixth first-century society, such principles were astounding.

The Bible says little about the role of women; it says much about fairness and justice in dealing with people and about responsibility toward God for what he gives us. That is the main thrust of the Bible and it is a message we had better take note of.

In my view, the God who made women as intelligent as men, and who made neither sex better than the other, expects women to use their potential every bit as much as he expects men to. Our society, in subordinating women to men, violates that expectation. — David A. Bedford, language laboratory director, Foreign Languages.

Ford nearly chose female VP in 1976

A BREEZE from an unexpected quarter, and of unknowable force, is blowing through American politics because of the nomination of Geraldine Ferraro. So this is a suitable inoment — for some Republicans, a melancholy moment — for recalling a footnote in American history that might have been a momentous chapter.

Eight years ago this month Gerald Ford came, he says, "very close" to picking a woman for his running mate.

A few hours after narrowly defeating Ronald Reagan in the convention roll call in Kansas City, a meeting began in Ford's suite. Ford, as many winners of nominations have done and with more excuse than most (he had been in an absorbing struggle with Reagan), approached a last minute decision about his vice-presidential choice.

HE HAD JUST returned from Ronald Reagan's hotel where, smarting from the bitter battle, he did not try to talk Reagan out of his announced refusal to consider the second spot. (Ford says he later learned that Reagan's friend Justin Dart had labored mightily — and successfully — to get Reagan to agree to take it if it were offered. But a condition of the meeting with Ford, a condition demanded by Reagan aides, was that the subject not come up.) Ford asked Reagan's opinion of six persons: Bill Simon, John Connally, Bob Dole, Howard Baker, Elliot Richardson and Bill Ruckelshaus. Reagan said Dole would be an excellent choice.

George Will
Washington Post Writers Group

Other persons who, in the preceding months, had been interviewed by Ford aides included Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa and Gov. (now senator) Dan Evans of Washington. And the former counselor to President Nixon, then ambassador to Great Britain, Anne Armstrong. When the meeting began at 3:15 a.m., Ford recalls, the list had been winnowed to a "final four": Baker, Dole, Ruckelshaus and Armstrong.

SEN. BOB GRIFFIN of Michigan, Ford's convention floor manager, was ardently for Armstrong, as was Mel Laird. So was Stuart Spencer, a Californian who had helped Reagan win California's governorship, then helped Ford defeat Reagan, and today is a leading light in Reagan's re-election campaign.

Armstrong's assets were that she is smart, tough, a Texan (a rancher) and could do for Ford, who was not considered electrifying, what Ferraro has done for Mondale, who is not considered long on electricity. That is, she could make his candidacy considerably more exciting.

The Democrats' convention had come first, and the first poll taken after it showed Carter with a 33-point — no, that is not a misprint: 33 — lead. Ford, a former football player, was thinking, with regard to Armstrong, that when you are far behind in the fourth quarter you throw caution to the wind and start throwing long passes.

IN THE MEETING Ford was reticent, allowing advisors to think aloud until the meeting broke up at about 5 a.m., scheduled to reconvene at 9 a.m. Bob Teeter, the Republican pollster, was there and recalls thinking that at one point Armstrong was in the lead. But Sen. John Tower of Texas had the feeling at 5 a.m. that Ruckelshaus was winning.

Ruckelshaus' role in Watergate (he resigned rather than implement Nixon's order to fire Archibald Cox, the special prosecutor) was his principal recommendation. The hope was that choosing him would undo some of the damage done to Ford by the pardon of Nixon. But Ruckelshaus was in private industry in Washington state and did not have a political staff, so he could not, as the politicians say, "hit the ground running."

Between 5 a.m. and 9 a.m. conservatives rallied around Dole. Some persons who were there believe Ford had always been leaning toward Dole. He had worked with him in the House, and knew him better than the others.

TEETER BELIEVES that 1982 was the "watershed year when it became an advantage to be a woman." In 1976, polling data indicated that resistance to a woman (not Armstrong in particular) among traditional Republican voters might match gains among other voters. But in his memoirs Ford wrote, "in retrospect, if given the opportunity to make that decision again, I might well have said, 'Damn the torpedoes,' and gambled on Anne."

Had he done so, he probably would have carried Texas. (Carter carried it with 51.1 percent.)

Vice President Armstrong probably would have been the Republican presidential nominee in 1980, running against...well, probably Ted Kennedy.

Downtown plans fill council's agenda

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council will examine plans for demolition of buildings on property acquired for the proposed conference center Monday.

The properties under consideration for demolition are the former sites of the Southern Barbeque Restaurant and Atwood Drugs, both on South Illinois Avenue between Monroe and Walnut streets. The properties were acquired by the city for the proposed hotel-conference center.

The council will also make a formal decision on a request from conference center developer Stan Hove that the city conditionally guarantee $4.5 million of the $14 million in bonds needed for the project.

The council informally approved a conditional guarantee of the bonds Aug. 6, allowing City Manager Bill Dixon to notify the Farmer's Home Administration of the city's willingness to guarantee its portion of the bonds. The FHMA would not guarantee the balance of the bonds until the city in-dedicated its willingness to guarantee $4.55 million in bonds.

The council is also expected to formally approve a recommendation from Dixon to retain Kurt Froehlich as special attorney for downtown development.

In another move related to South Illinois Avenue, the council will discuss a proposal from the Chamber of Commerce to remove parking meters on that street between Freeman and Walnut streets. The chamber's plan stipulates that the two-hour parking limit which in that area be retained.

A public hearing will hold on a proposed tax levy increase for 1984. The council is expected to act on the proposed increase Aug. 27.

The council will also consider asking Rep. Paul Simon and Sens. Charles Percy and Alan Dixon to support legislation preserving the regulatory and franchising authority of cities over cable television. A recent move by the Federal Communications Commission to deregulate cable television was recently upheld by the Supreme Court.

The National League of Cities has asked municipalities to urge their legislators to support laws retaining municipal authority over cable television.

The council will also consider revised plans for a drive-in facility at Taco Bell on East Walnut Street. Restaurant representatives requested a special use permit for the facility at a July 2 council meeting, but the council expressed concerns about the proposed facility's effect on traffic flow and safety in the area.

The council will also consider a recommendation from the Planning Commission to permit Captain D's Seafood Restaurant to operate a drive-up window at its East Walnut Street and South Logan Avenue

TESTS: Student grading questioned

cern that students graded civil service exams. Employment Services spokesmen replied that students received the same training given to regular civil service employees, and that the students' scoring was rechecked by supervisors.

After an audit on July 17, University officials acknowledged the involvement of student workers in the grading process and reported that students "appeared well-trained and supervised" during their duties.

Personnel officer Barbara Anderson, who trains the students, said they must follow a scoring guide provided by SUCSS when scoring all parts of the exam. Student workers must grade essays strictly by the guidelines, she said.

Anderson said she rechecks each test before it is sent to Champaign, where the SUCSS checks it again.

Anderson, who has been a personnel officer for about six years, said she doesn't question the students' ability. She said they are trained for one to two months prior to grading, and continue to learn from their supervisors on the job. Most remain on the job until they graduate, she said.

Employment Services is funded by the state, but receives federal aid to hire students on college work-study. Two students who grade exams are on the work-study program.

Students who qualify for work-study are interviewed first for the grading positions. A problem arises when a student reaches the pay limit and must be dropped from the payroll until the next semester.

Nelson retires, but won't quit

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

When most people retire, they travel, relax, or perhaps just work in their yards.

Randall Nelson, who is gradually phasing into retirement from his position as a professor in the political science department, is going to write constitutional law case book, he said.

"I've already written four chapters. These chapters are sort of an introduction to the judicial system and process. Students need this sort of background before they actually read the cases," said Nelson, who has been at SIU-C for 29 years.

"It's primarily for political science students, not law students," he said.

"I'm not setting any deadlines for completion, because I've set some in the past and haven't met them. I'd like to get it done by the end of next summer, or I'll burn it," he said.

Nelson said he expected some difficulty with the book's publishers. "The first four chapters are like those written for a research paper. I'm expecting them to object to the number of footnotes."

'It's a general nuisance to read a fact with no authority.'

"I'm going to stand my ground, though. It's a general nuisance to read a fact with no authority. An unsupported statement is not worth much," he said.

Whether or not the book will be used at SIU-C will be up to the individual instructors, Nelson said.

"I certainly wouldn't persuade any of my colleagues to use the book without first reading it," he said.

"If I were still teaching, though, I would use it, simply because I think it's good."

Nelson, who has been a professor emeritus since June 1, will be teaching a class in constitutional law this year and will keep his position as faculty ombudsman, a post he has had for a year and a half, he said.

"This is basically a part-time job, although no matter how little you have to do, you can still make it into a full-time job," Nelson said.

Nelson said his contract with the University comes up for renewal each year. Whether or not he renews his contract next year is undecided. "I'm going to play that by ear," he said.

Nelson didn't teach any classes during the summer term. The professor emeritus status requires that he not accept employment from the University for 60 days, he said.

Nelson received bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in political science from the University of Michigan.

"I was a late starter. I went as a freshman when I was 27, after 6 years in the Army and serving in World War II."

After receiving his master's degree, Nelson was a teaching fellow for two years at Michigan, a position similar to teaching assistant at SIU, he said.

In his final year at Michigan, Nelson received a scholarship to work on his dissertation. He finished the requirements for his doctorate in the fall of 1955, but wasn't awarded the degree formally until February 1956. He began teaching at SIU-C in September 1955.

Nelson said he has seen great changes in the University since that time.

"The growth at SIU-C has been tremendous. When I came here, the library was in Wheeler Hall and only had around 165,000 volumes. Most of the new buildings have been built since I was here, like the Student Center, Faner, Lawson, Life Science II and the engineering buildings," he said.

"Most of the students were local to the area when I came here. If you had a student in your class from the East Coast, you wondered how he got lost. That whole situation has changed now, since a good deal of the students now come from the northern part of the state," he said.

"I've enjoyed my 29 years of working with the students and my colleagues at SIU. I think we've turned out some good students," Nelson said.

Blast injures researcher at U of I

CHAMPAIGN (AP) — A visiting researcher from Israel remained hospitalized for treatment of first- and second-degree burns after an explosion at the University of Illinois.

The blast in the Nuclear Physics Laboratory injured Ray Moreh, but it did not involve radioactive material or pose a danger of any radiation leaks, U of I officials said.

The initial explosion, which happened Thursday as Moreh was transferring potassium from one container to another, blew out a wall in the lab.

Water leaking from a broken pipe then got on the potassium and caused several smaller explosions, officials said.

"Potassium reacts with water or moisture in the air," said William Duckwitz, supervisor of fire services at the university. "Even a drop of sweat can cause a problem."

U of I officials estimated the damage to the building at $5,000 to $10,000.

members are also invited to attend. A donation of $8 per family group is requested to cover material costs.

"I Can Cope" includes presentations and films on the disease process, terms related to cancer, cancer treatment, nutrition, enhancing self-esteem, understanding emotions, maintaining activity and locating resources that can help. Instructors include a physician, nurses, a dietitian, a social worker and other invited guests.

"I Can Cope" is a proven educational program developed by the American Cancer Society and has been endorsed by health professionals.

Jobs offered in park, forest management

Opportunities for college students to obtain volunteer positions in conservation and resource management for the coming winter and spring seasons are available through the Student Conservation Association's Park, Forest and Resource Assistant Program.

These positions enable students to participate in the work of government agencies responsible for the care and management of the country's public lands or to assist in the activities of private organizations dedicated to land and resource conservation.

During the winter and spring of 1984-85, the program will place about 150 volunteers in more than 75 national parks, national forests, wilderness areas, resource management areas, wildlife refuges and private conservation areas throughout the United States. Most positions are for 12 weeks and involve tasks and projects similar to those performed by the professional personnel of the host agency or organization. Assignments range from giving interpretive programs for visitors and patrolling back-country trails to conducting field research or cultural resource surveys.

Interested people should send a postcard requesting the 1985 PFRA Program List and an application to the Student Conservation Association, Department RP, P.O. Box 550C, Charlestown, N.H., 03603. The telephone number is 603-826-5206.

It's a dog's world, but it's people's court

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

Dog owners may find that man's best friend can be an expensive friend if they don't follow city and county regulations.

In Carbondale, fines to owners run as much as $200 for violations of the city animal control ordinance.

Lloyd Nelson of Jackson County Animal Control said regulations and fines for animal control vary from city to county to state levels, and owners are responsible for knowing these laws.

"There are a lot of students who have pets and don't even realize what the ordinances are until they get fined," he said.

He said one state law which applies at all levels requires that all dogs be vaccinated for rabies and have tags on display at all times.

In addition, Carbondale and Jackson County have rules of their own. The Carbondale animal control ordinance requires that cats and dogs be vaccinated for rabies, and that dogs be licensed with the city. Licenses, which must be renewed each year, cost $1 for spayed or neutered dogs and $7 for those who have not been spayed or neutered.

Carbondale also requires all dogs to be on a leash anytime they are off owners' property. Neal Jacobson of the Carbondale Police Department adds, "Verbal control does not constitute a leash."

Dogs may also be fined for "any untimely or excessive barking," and other annoying habits.

The city does not require that animals be spayed or neutered, but encourages it by charging higher fines for violations by animals that are not. Illinois law, however, requires that all animals adopted from a humane shelter be spayed.

If dogs are picked up for violation of any of these laws, their owners will be fined $10 if the animal has been spayed and $30 if not. Each violation carries an additional fine.

Fines go up drastically for repeat violators. A second violation of any of the laws will cost $20 for an animal that is spayed and $60 for one that isn't. A third violation will cost $40 for an animal that is spayed and $120 for one that isn't. Any violations after that will cost $200 for all animals.

County officials follow state laws which require rabies tags, but Jackson County has no leash law. Owners will be fined only if someone makes a specific complaint about an animal, or if their animals have no rabies tags.

Fines for violations in Jackson County are $20 plus court costs for each violation.

Jackson County also does not require cats to be vaccinated, though Nelson said it is strongly recommended. He said the number of rabid cats in the county is increasing.

In Carbondale and Jackson County, animals without tags whose owners cannot be found will be taken to the humane shelter and kept for seven days. Owners will be charged boarding costs if they claim the animal.

Nelson said that an additional reason for owners to tag animals is injury. If pets are injured, their owners or veterinarians can be contacted.

In addition to the rabies vaccination law, Nelson said, the state requires all dog bites to be reported immediately. Offending animals must be quarantined for 10 days.

Owners are also liable for any injuries or damages their animals cause, Illinois law states.

If a dog kills someone's livestock, that person has a right to kill the dog, and its owner is responsible for any loss of property.

Prof's works set for gallery in Paducah

Joel Feldman, assistant professor of art, will have his sculptures and lithographs on display at the Art Gallery of the Paducah Art Guild through Sept. 22.

The Art Gallery is located in the Market House at Second and Broadway and is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Feldman's art has been exhibited in numerous solo exhibitions throughout the United States including the Clara M. Eagle Gallery in Murray, Ky., the Henri Gallery in Washington, D.C., the Hansen Gallery in New York, the New Harmony Gallery of Contemporary Art at New Harmony, Ind., and at Austin Peay University in Clarksville, Tenn. He has also exhibited outside the United States in Studio Seventy in Brighton, England, the Redfern Gallery in London, the University of Sussex, Sussex, England, and the Joseph Novak Gallery in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

His works exhibited at the Paducah Art Guild Gallery are closely related to and inspired by American folk art.

Housing starts dive, but bulk of economy zooms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts declined a sharp 6.6 percent in July, leading one analyst to predict an impending recession in the housing industry, but the rest of the economy zoomed along as industrial output hit its highest level in more than four years.

The Commerce Department said that new housing was started at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.76 million units in July, with the construction level for single-family homes falling to its lowest point since December 1982.

The decline was blamed on high mortgage interest rates, which have been going up for five months. While some in the housing industry predicted hopefully that rates have peaked, others were more pessimistic.

"We are clearly headed for a recession in housing," said Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders.

He predicted the annual rate of starts would drop to 1.5 million units or lower by the end of the year. Some 1.7 million units were built in 1983.

Sumichrast said his association's monthly survey of builders showed that the number expressing good to excellent prospects for future single-family sales fell to 8 percent in August. It had been 53 percent as recently as March.

Rates on conventional fixed mortgages have risen for the past five months, hitting 15.2 percent in July, according to a survey by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Vets in college offered part-time jobs

The Illinois Job Service has part-time job openings for veterans attending college under the Vietnam Era Educational Benefits program. These positions will be working with the Veterans Employment Representatives in providing services to veteran applicants seeking employment.

The positions are part-time, 20 hours per week, and will be in the five Job Service offices located in four counties. Veterans eligible for employment will be assigned to the office nearest their homes.

Randolph County residents may be assigned to Chester or Sparta, Perry County residents to DuQuoin, Union County residents to Anna and Jackson County residents to Murphysboro.

Those veterans interested in applying for these positions should bring their DD Form 214s and their certificates of eligibilities for educational benefits to the Murphysboro Job Service office at 223 S. 13th St., Murphysboro, and ask for the Veterans Employment Representative.

Move to residence halls fun, but hectic

By Cynthia Weiss
Staff Writer

Moving day can be hectic for anyone. But a student's first move to college tends to be even more unnerving.

For 18-year-old Nancy Sanchez the move has been a three-month long process. Sanchez, a new member of the SIU-C gymnastic team, grew up in Mexico.

From Mexico City, Sanchez moved to her grandmother's home in Benton three months ago, and completed the move to SIU-C Wednesday. But it's not over yet. Placed in temporary housing in Neely Hall, Sanchez says, "I'm temporary, and with another two girls in the room, it's crowded."

As for Roy Prince, 18, of Carlyle, "everything went OK" with his move on Wednesday. That is, everything except for his dorm room door, which he couldn't seem to get open.

"Everyone's making fun of me," Prince said.

Prince's roommate, Darin Miller, a freshman in journalism from LeRoy, said he has no problem with their door in Abbott Hall of Thompson Point. He did, however, complain that he was "rushed in the driveway to get my stuff out and move it."

When asked how her move went, Kim Holtquist, newly of Bowyer Hall, said that there was nothing out of the ordinary about it. In fact, "it was a lot smoother and less chaotic than I expected," she said.

Holtquist praised the student life advisers who helped her with her moving experience. "The SLAs are great," she said. "They've been super helpful. One even helped us arrange our room."

"Everyone's so friendly," Holtquist added. "That's the best. It makes everything so much easier," Holtquist said.

Once moved in, other concerns plague the new student.

How best to get from point A to point B on campus, how to deal with Woody Hall, how to cope with the cost of books, and how to get along with a new roommate are just a few.

Steve Ernest, 19, who just moved into the 15th floor of Schneider, said, "It's a hassle to get elevators, but I get really good radio reception."

Ernest said he really hasn't seen enough of his roommate yet to form an opinion, but, "he doesn't have any fluorescent clothes or anything, so I know he's normal," Ernest said.

Walter Burrell, freshman in technical photography, said he's going to like living in Neely Hall. "Fortunately, in my major all my classes are in the same building right by Neely," Burrell said.

Burrell said he also appreciates the way the SIU-C campus is set up. "It's a lot more spread out than other schools I visited." And, Burrell added, "The people here are very nice."

Nineteen-year-old Scott Shrum from Galesburg spent the first semester of his freshman year at a small engineering school of 2500 students in Chicago. The size of SIU-C's campus "surprised" Shrum, who said, "I came from living in an apartment with three roommates in a western suburb of Chicago to living with 800 hallmates."

Shrum also likes the campus. "It's a lot better than living in Chicago," he said. "I come from the country. I like trees and grass a lot better than concrete," Shrum said.

Woody Hall didn't bother Shrum too much. "I was lucky. Everything went perfectly," he said, then added, "other than the wait."

Paula Hooper, Sparta, and Becky Pittman, Champaign, are new roommates who agree on at least one thing. "We really like our SLA. She's been very helpful," Hooper said.

Pittman, whose hometown, Champaign, is the home of the University of Illinois, said, "I like the SIU-C campus a lot better than the U of I. People are a lot friendlier here."

Smuggled jewels may be shah's

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Government agents intercepted smugglers with millions of dollars worth of jewelry that may have belonged to the deposed Iranian monarchy, informed sources reported Friday. They said the treasures included a diamond the size of an apricot.

The Federal Investigation Agency confirmed that two men — an Iranian and an Afghan — were arrested by its officers Thursday aboard a bus at the Iran-Pakistan border with a cache of jewelry. But it would not speculate officially on where the jewels came from.

"Some of the treasures could be up to 1,000 years old. It is impossible to assess the value of the haul," said an agency statement.

Informed sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said it was believed that the artifacts, which also included antiques, were looted from the Golestan Palace Museum in the Iranian capital of Tehran in early 1979, when Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi fled the country in the face of revolution.

A second jewelry collection, the Iranian crown jewels, is known to be still in safekeeping at the central bank in Tehran.

Advocacy group membership drive signs up 25,000

CHICAGO (AP) — The Citizens Utility Board, formed last year as a consumer advocate on utility rate increases and related issues, has signed up 25,000 members since a membership drive began in May, the board said.

Those who have signed up so far have singled out rising electric rates and high utility taxes as the issues they are most concerned about, according to Larry Kamer, membership campaign director for the board.

"The early and sizeable response to CUB's membership campaign is remarkable," Kamer said. "It tells us that consumers who feel the pressure of ever-increasing utility bills see CUB as a way of fighting back."

Kamer said the board is aiming for a membership of 100,000 within a year of the start of its membership drive.

The board's membership, divided by congressional districts, is highest in Chicago and its suburbs, according to an analysis of the first 18,000 membership applications.

USO voter registration result of change in state election law

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization will register voters from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. weekdays until Oct. 1 in the south lobby of the Student Center.

"We'll be registering people who have changed their address, people who have moved in from another county or state, and people who have never been registered before," said David Strong, USO chief-of-staff.

"We can also register people who are not yet 18, but will be 18 on election day," he said.

Starting Sept. 17, the USO will set up tables elsewhere in the Student Center where people can register from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, Strong said.

According to a USO press release, several civic organizations have been working with USO in its efforts. These include the League of Women Voters, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the American Association of University Women, the Southern Illinois Peace Coalition and the Women's Center.

The USO is able to register voters because of a change in state election laws, according to Andy Leighton, USO president.

"Before July 1, 1984, only elected officials, city and county clerks, and at-large registrars from the Republican and Democratic parties could register people. After the new law took effect on July 1, an organization could apply to the State Board of Elections for certification as a bona fide state civic organization. A list of such organizations is given to county clerks and the organization can have its members apply to the clerk to become deputy registrars," Leighton said.

At a meeting on Aug. 15, 18 people representing the USO and other civic organizations were sworn in as deputy registrars, Leighton said.

Leighton is going to try to meet his campaign promise of registering 10,000 students, he said, but it may prove difficult.

"A lot of people are already registered in Jackson County, people are registered in their home counties and don't want to change, and a lot of people simply don't care to register," he said.

"We can register more than just students," Leighton said.

"We may not make 10,000, but we're going to try. Our at-large registrarships expire Dec. 1, and we can reapply at that time, and register people for the city elections in April," he said.

Volunteering means class credit, learning

By Jeff Curl
Staff Writer

Whether working on a crisis hotline or teaching kids to swim, volunteering can give students class credit, personal growth and even a letter of reference for future jobs, according to Paul Denise, assistant professor in community development.

"Just putting a student in a real world agency can develop a lot of self confidence," said Denise. "Students can get training in their fields of study and witness a lot of situations that can be important growth experiences."

Denise is coordinator of a meeting at 9 a.m. Friday in Quigley 202 for students interested in doing volunteer work for class credit.

At the meeting, representatives of several campus and community volunteer organizations will present information about their services.

Denise said one student who read for a blind person said she was grateful for the experience because she became aware of different fields of study and realized that "just because you're blind doesn't mean you're not a person."

Another student, who's majoring in physical education, is volunteering to design a wellness and fitness program for a new Carbondale alternative school. Her work not only helps her get experience in her field, but will acquaint her with professionals who can be possible job prospects.

Anyone not satisfied with the learning experience or the class credit may feel better knowing that, without their volunteer work, a lot of organizations would be out in the cold.

"There are a lot of organizations in Southern Illinois that couldn't run without volunteers," Denise said.

Denise said that agencies can use volunteers from nearly every major. He said one student majoring in interior design helped an organization make better use of building space.

For more information about the meeting, contact Denise at 536-7521 or Carol Gross at 453-2243.

Saluki football players Eric Givens, Melving Williams and Freddie Jones found a novel way to beat the summer heat during practice at McAndrew Stadium.

Improvement seen for men's tennis

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

After last season's disappointing record, Saluki men's tennis coach Dick Lefevre is expecting much improvement for this year.

Last year, several injuries struck the netters as they posted a 4-17 mark before finishing fourth in the conference tourney.

Lefevre, beginning his 28th season as SIU-C's men's tennis coach, sees nothing but improvement for the Salukis. After last season's slow start, SIU-C won its last three matches before finishing strong at the conference meet.

Per Wadmark, a junior from Sweden, returns to handle the No. 1 singles spot. Last season, Wadmark had a disappointing spring after having an impressive fall, but did team up with fellow Swede Lars Nilsson to capture the No. 1 doubles title for SIU-C. Wadmark has played the top spot since his freshman year, and Lefevre is looking for a big year out of him.

"Per had a poor spring, but he is a great player. He played against a lot of the toughest college players in the country," he said.

Gabriel Coch, a senior from Colombia, played No. 2 singles, and should be even better this season after a year's experience at that spot. Nilsson, who is recovering from an elbow surgery, is expected to play the third spot in singles and team up once again with Wadmark at doubles to give the Salukis a strong doubles team.

Chris Visconti, a walk-on from Chicago, played the No. 4 spot last year and Lefevre is looking for him to be tough this year. Rolie Oliquino, from Manila, Philippines, is doubtful this season due to a knee injury.

Lefevre says he has plenty of talent. Paul Rasch, strong left-handed player, has the strong forehand and overhand to make him a tough doubles player. Rene Crespo, Roeland de Kort, Scott Krueger and Steven Quaynor will play big roles this season as the Salukis try to reverse last year's record.

While he will be working with a lot of young players, Lefevre thinks the team will have a winning record this season.

"A lot depends on what the players did over the summer, but we are looking forward to a much better record than last year," he said. "We had a lot of key guys hurt last year, and our record showed it."

The Salukis will open the fall season by competing in an invitational at Murray State on Sept. 29-30, and will travel to Illinois State on Oct. 12-14 for the Illinois Intercollegiate Invitational. The spring season is expected to begin on Feb. 1.

Practice began last week for the SIU-C women's tennis team, and Coach Judy Auld is hoping for a big year from her squad, which finished third at last April's Gateway Conference Championship.

The team, which posted a 19-6 record last season, will return all but one member of last season's team. Stacy Sherman, who played No. 5 singles and No. 2 doubles last season, graduated after recording a 23-16 mark in her final year.

The top two positions will once again be filled by Alessandra Molinari and Heidi Eastman, with conference champion Mary Pat Kramer handling the No. 3 spot. Kramer was 14-5 last fall, and finished the year at 32-16 in singles play. She didn't lose one set on her way to the championship at Wichita, Kan.

Maureen and Kathy Harney and Amanda Allen are back from last year's team, giving the squad plenty of experience. Maureen, the older of the two Harney sisters, was 29-19 last year at No. 4 singles, giving her a career mark of 95-38. After a slow start in the fall, Allen posted a 13-11 record in the spring season and placed second at the post-season tournament.

With three new players, the Salukis will enjoy more depth this year than they've had in the past. Top recruit Ellen Moellering from St. Louis and walk-ons Sue Stubby and Sherri Knight will join the returning players to give Coach Auld a solid team. Moellering is ranked seventh in the Missouri Valley Tennis Association and should see a lot of action.

"I've only seen Ellen play a couple of times, but she's going to be a fine player. She might break into the top six, but it's too early to tell," Auld said.

Auld is hoping for a 20-win season this year, after falling one victory short last year, but more importantly, she would like to win the team conference title. She says consistency will play a big role in the success of the Salukis.

"It is very difficult for the players at the top two spots to come up with winning seasons because they are always playing against very talented players, but I think our girls can do a fine job," Auld said. "Heidi has all the tools to play No. 1, she just lacks the confidence."

Auld, who began coaching at SIU-C in 1975, thinks this year's squad has a good chance at winning the conference title, a feat the Salukis accomplished in 1982.

According to Auld, Wichita State and the Salukis are the teams to beat this year. Drake finished second last year behind Wichita State, but they've lost four starters from last year due to graduation, and Bradley and Indiana State will also be rebuilding this year.

"We will have as good a chance as anyone at winning it, but a lot depends on the seedings and the draws we get at the end of the year," she said.

Practice last week consisted of running and drills, with challenge matches between the players starting this week. The fall season will begin on Sept. 7-8 against Bradley, Illinois State, Western Illinois and Indiana State and will close on Oct. 12-13 against Memphis State, Louisville and Illinois State.

REPEAT: Team to try again

Tony Anderson, redshirt freshman Curt Reed, and senior Tony Adams, who saw limited action last year.

But the problem doesn't end there. Tight end Carey Shepard was also declared academically ineligible, further depleting the receiving corps. Carbondale native Mike O'Day will be the opening day tight end.

Fullback is another position that Dorr must fill. Sophomore Bruce Phibbs looks like the player to take over Corky Field's old spot. Dorr has indicated that he will use a fullback-oriented offense, so a quality player will be needed to fill the gap there.

Dorr must also fill in the three spots in his defensive secondary. Only strong safety B.T. Thomas, who last year was considered the weakest member of the secondary, returns. Sophomore Tony Jackson will take the cornerback spot vacated by All-American Terry Taylor, the first-round draft pick of the Seattle Seahawks. Senior Carl Martin will replace All-Missouri Valley Conference player Donnell Daniel at the other cornerback position.

Those two players will fill the biggest shoes on the team this year. Last year, Daniel and Taylor sealed off the long ball, allowing the Saluki linebackers to concentrate on stopping the rushing attack. If those two can't stop the long ball, the Saluki defense will have some long Saturday afternoons.

The longest afternoons may be the first two. The Salukis will open their season in Oklahoma September 1 against four-time defending MVC champ Tulsa and then travel to Normal where they will meet the up-and-coming Illinois State Redbirds. It won't be surprising if the Salukis come out of those first two games with an 0-2 record.

Dorr does have a lot of quality talent on the squad, but 78 of the 125 players who reported for fall practice are either redshirts or freshmen. The Salukis have the look of a very young team.

Last year, Saluki fans got a taste of what it was like to have the best team in the country. But this is a new season and a new team. An encore of 1983 will be difficult to produce. But don't shed too many tears for this year's Saluki squad. Ticket sales are increasing and Men's Athletics Director Lew Hartzog has said interest in the football program is at an all-time high. All things considered, Ray Dorr has inherited a program that is in pretty good shape.

Men harriers must get mileage from lower lineup, Cornell says

By Duane Crays
Sports Editor

While the men's cross country team may boast one of the best one-two-three punches, Coach Bill Cornell feels that the team lacks the depth to repeat as state champions.

"As we stand right now, we don't stand a chance of making it to the finals as a team," he said. "But we may place some individuals into the finals."

The squad will again be led by senior All-American Chris Bunyan, who has spent his summer in England preparing for the season and helping Cornell recruit runners.

Cornell said that his No. 2 runner will be Kevin Sturman, a sophomore who was the team's No. 1 runner and the Missouri Valley Conference's No. 2 runner two years ago. Freshman Andrew Pettigrew will be the team's No. 3 runner.

While the first three spots are set, Cornell said the team is hurting in the Nos. 4 and 5 spots.

Cornell said he is counting on sophomore David Lamont, who last year split the No. 5 spot with Brian McClain, to fill the No. 4 position on the squad.

"I'm hoping that David can improve on last season's performance," Cornell said.

"We are really hurting for a runner for the No. 5 spot," he said. "I'm hoping that either

Bill Cornell

David Behm or Mike Elliott improve enough to become solid No. 5 runners."

Behm was the team's No. 8 runner while Elliott was the No. 9 runner last year, but Cornell said that the two are half-mile runners and not long-distance runners.

This year's walk-on crop is also full of halfmilers.

"Unless one of our walk-ons proves to be a pleasant surprise, we will have no backup on the team," Cornell said.

He said that last year's No. 2 runner, Eddie Wedderburn, had a year of eligibility left, but decided to teach in England.

The runner Cornell said he was hoping to fill the No. 5 spot was McClain. However, McClain announced this summer he would not be returning to the team.

"When he announced that he wasn't returning, it was too late for us to recruit any All-Americans," he said. "Chris tried to recruit some runners in England, but it was too late to get anyone there too."

Cornell said that he hadn't heard from McClain recently, but said he had heard McClain might return to the team as a walk-on.

"Right now, I have no idea what Brian is going to do," he said.

Cornell said that he would welcome McClain back if he does decide to run cross country.

With his team suffering deep problems, Cornell said that Illinois State looks like the team to beat this season.

"They were fighting with us all season long last year, and they are returning most of their top runners plus some strong additions," he said. "They look very strong this year."

"We can't afford any injury or sickness of any kind this season," Cornell said. "If we keep healthy, we have a chance of finishing high in the standings. Who knows, one of our walk-ons might solidify the team. Stranger things have happened."

Smooth thrower

Saluki quarterback Darren Dixon prepares to pass during a practice session at McAndrew Stadium. Dixon, a senior, is replacing Rick Johnson, SIU-C's record-setting quarterback who now plays for the Oklahoma Outlaws of the USFL.

New intramural director wants more participation in programs

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

Increasing the participation and decreasing the forfeit rate are the two main concerns Bill McMinn, SIU-C's new intramural coordinator, is faced with.

McMinn, who last year was in charge of intramural officiating, is replacing Joyce Craven, who resigned as coordinator to do doctoral work in health education at SIU-C.

McMinn's responsibilities will include: the scheduling of both individual and dual sports, the maintenance of the playing areas, and arranging special events like swimming, track and wrestling meets and officiating the games.

"I would have to say my first goal would be to cut down on the forfeit rate, and to get more people involved with the intramural program," McMinn said. "So many people don't know how much we have to offer."

McMinn expects to get a lot of help from his two full-time assistants, Buddy Goldammer and Kathy Hollister. Goldammer, the assistant coordinator, worked for the intramural program at the University of Arkansas before coming to SIU-C. Hollister will be in charge of promotions and publicity, and McMinn says she will be responsible for increasing the participation of new students.

"We would really like to see more freshmen participate. Kathy will be working in the dorms and the cafeterias, and she'll handle most of the promotions," McMinn said.

Another concern of McMinn's is the improvement of the playing facilities. The intramural program will be faced with limited fields this semester, due to the renovation of the fields along side the SIU-C Arena.

"Those fields haven't been touched in years; the work is badly needed," he said.

The list of activities for the fall semester includes 18 sporting events. The only change from last year is that soccer will be played indoors this season. Entries are being taken now for: tennis singles and doubles, 12" slow pitch softball, disc golf, floor hockey, badminton singles, 18-hole golf, and volleyball. Entries will open Sept. 10 for badminton doubles, tennis mixed singles, flag football, and racquetball singles. On Sept. 24 entries will be taken for innertube water polo, badminton mixed doubles, indoor mini-soccer, and wrestling.

"Turkey Trot", a three-mile cross country race, and "Turkey Shoot", a freethrow contest, will begin taking entries on Oct. 15. The race is scheduled for Nov. 10, and the freethrow contest for Nov. 14.

McMinn also plans to offer more for international students besides soccer and badminton.

New SIU-C intramural coordinator Bill McMinn shows off some of the equipment used in sports offered by the intramural program.

"I plan to have more events for the international students to participate in," he said. "Break time should be a good time to schedule events that are designed for them."

There is an officials' orientation meeting planned for Wed., Aug. 22 at 5 p.m. in Room 158 of the Student Recreation Center.

"I will have several intramurals officials back from last year, and I think they will do a fine job this year," McMinn said. "I hope to see an increase in the membership for the officials' club this year."

DORR: Depth a problem

secondary.

The defensive secondary is not the only spot where Dorr must deal with a depth problem. The Salukis are also thin in numbers at the receiver and running back positions.

Split end James Stevenson, who caught 35 passes last season, has been declared academically ineligible. Senior Tony Anderson, a converted running back, will attempt to fill the hole.

SOPHOMORE Todd Rotz has a foothold on the flanker spot. Rotz was named the most improved receiver during spring drills. Senior Tony Adams and redshirt freshman Derrick McClellon will back up Rotz. Carbondale native Mike O'Day has inherited the tight end position because last year's starter, Carey Shepard, has been declared academically ineligible.

The running back situation appears more stable, but the Salukis are again short on numbers. Tailback Derrick Taylor, who led SIU-C in rushing with 695 yards, returns for his senior year. Sophomore Bruce Phibbs will fill the fullback position. Dorr is looking for athletes who can effectively play behind Taylor and Phibbs.

"WE'RE THIN but enthusiastic," Dorr said. "Our offense will be a fullback-oriented type of offense and it's important to us to have a strong person there. We'll have to find someone to back Phibbs up."

One position Dorr isn't worried about is quarterback. Senior Darren Dixon has played well in practice and will be the Salukis' starting signal caller.

"HE'S LOOKED very good," Dorr said. "He's done the things needed to take the job."

"He has a strong arm. He understands the defensive flow, which is a plus. He is also able to audible well. He throws the fade patterns well and is confident."

Dorr said he is basically satisfied with his team's performance in fall drills thus far.

"I think the team's trying hard," Dorr said. "You have to get the players to work with intensity in practice. They've taken the bull by the horns. They enjoy each other and they enjoy winning. They are really a fine group of kids."

Saluki coaches open tryouts; all students get chance to play

A number of SIU-C athletic teams will be offering open tryouts for any students interested in competing in intercollegiate athletics this year.

The football team, coached by Ray Dorr, will offer a tryout on Saturday, Aug. 25, at 5 p.m. at McAndrew Stadium.

An organizational meeting for students participating on the women's cross country and track and field teams will be held Tuesday, Aug. 21, at 7 p.m. in the Davies Gym lounge. Coach Don DeNoon said anyone who has an interest and experience in any of the track events is welcome to attend.

Tryouts for the women's tennis team will be held Monday, Aug. 20, at 3 p.m. at the University tennis courts. Coach

Judy Auld will conduct the tryout.

Tryouts for the men's baseball team will be held Monday, Aug. 20, at 3 p.m. at Abe Martin Field. Coach Itchy Jones will conduct the tryout.

The field hockey team, coached by Julie Illner, will hold tryouts this week at Wham Field. Any interested student should report to Wham Field Monday through Friday at 3:30 p.m. for practice.

The men's cross country and track and field teams will offer a tryout Friday, Aug. 31, at 7 p.m. at the Arena.

The women's basketball team, coached by Cindy Scott, will hold a tryout Monday, Sept. 10 at 5:30 p.m. at Davies Gymnasium.

Spikers deep in experience, bench

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

The 1984 SIU-C volleyball team boasts a solid group of veterans and a promising bench of recruits as they seek the top position in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference standings, Coach Debbie Hunter said.

The upcoming schedule and the loss of only one player, Mary Maxwell, have beamed rays of hope on the upcoming season. "I feel with the situation we've got in front of us, we should have a fine season," Hunter said.

Newcomers Sue Sinclair of Carbondale and Catalina Romero of Bogota, Colombia are training as setters. Linda Walker has become a defensive specialist, but all of them along with Tracy Juntunen and Joan Wallenberg have versatility, Hunter said.

"I think all of them can be all-around players," Hunter said. "Our foundation this year will be our older players, but we'll have a lot of help from the bench when we need it."

Returnees include middle blockers Chris Boyd, Pat Nicholson and Janice Tremblay; hitters Linda Sanders, Darlene Hogue and Donna Tindall; setter Lisa Cummins and defensive specialist Jill Broker.

Hunter said Chris Fark, another Carbondale native, will eventually see action this season, but is now undergoing knee rehabilitation. Fark practiced with the team last season, but did not play.

The team will open the 1984 campaign at Evansville University on Aug. 31 and return to Davies Gymnasium on Sept. 1 to battle the SIU-C alumni team.

Bandy replaces Chambers as assistant women's AD

Nancy Bandy will replace Nikki Chambers as assistant women's athletic director at SIU-C.

The announcement was made Aug. 13 by SIU-C Women's Athletic Director Charlotte West. Bandy had served as an administrative aid for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women at SIU-C since June, 1981.

"Nancy was one of 28 applicants for our position and was a near unanimous pick of our staff and search committee," West said.

Bandy is a 1973 graduate of Eastern Illinois University, where she was a standout softball and basketball player for the Lady Panthers.

Bandy is currently a graduate student at SIU-C, pursuing a doctoral degree in Higher Education.

Active in campus affairs, Bandy has held a number of offices with SIU-C's Graduate and Professional Student Council.

Recruits: Newcomers to help women's teams

gymnasts won the Gateway Invitational.

Coach Cindy Scott's basketball team is definitely in a rebuilding stage, said West, because four of last season's five starters graduated. Freshmen have filled those open positions, and strong recruitment has seemingly provided Scott with a potential GCAC championship team.

Recruits include All-State center-forward Bridget Bonds from St. Louis, forward-centers Mary Berghuis and Genevieve Hicks, and guards Julie West, Anne Thouvenin and Mary Noble.

THE TEAM will be tested immediately when the season tips off against second-ranked Tennessee in November.

The softball team also signed "probably their best recruits ever," West said. Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer brought in a string of freshmen and will open the exhibition season Sept. 7-8 at the Redbird Invitational in Normal.

The graduation of fifth singles player Stacey Sherman is the only problem facing Coach Judy Auld's tennis team. Recruit Ellen Moellering and two walk-ons, Sue Stube and Sherrie Knight, will work in an effort to achieve a 20-win season.

CROSS COUNTRY and track are expected to see the greatest improvements, West said. Coach Don DeNoon anticipates a top three finish in the GCAC by SIU-C record holder Lisa Reimund and a third-place conference finish from his team. Coach Debbie Hunter and her volleyball team have put last year's disheartening experience behind them and hope to regain a top three position in the GCAC.

The 1983 season ended, for the most part, when Chris Boyd and Linda Sanders were sidelined with injuries.

WALK-ONS, RECRUITS and returnees on the '84 squad will work toward a team goal of third place in the GCAC.

A winning season is the personal goal of field hockey coach Julie Illner. Her team will play as an independent this season because of the GCAC's decision to drop field hockey as a conference sport.

THE WOMEN'S athletics program has seen improvement financially, said West. "Our scholarship funding has improved because of a compliance agreement with the Office of Civil Rights, which said SIU-C women's athletics had to be given more scholarship money."

back and see how the teams did," Hartzog said, "but we have to look forward to what is in store for this year."

Hartzog said new head football coach Ray Dorr is excited about the upcoming season.

"Ray will have a tough time emulating the success that last year's team had," he said, "but he will give the fans an exciting team."

HARTZOG ADMITTED this year's team is inexperienced, but said the team has the ability to be a winner this season.

While Hartzog admits the football team will be hard pressed to duplicate last season's record, he feels that the 1984 Saluki basketball team will be better than last year's team.

"I think the basketball team will be a good deal better than last year's team," he said.

"Coach Van Winkle is returning everybody and has strengthened the team with jucos (junior college transfers) and freshmen. We're optimistic about this year."

HARTZOG POINTED out that the basketball team was 12-2 at home last season.

"We are hoping that the continued success of the team will draw more students and area residents back to the Arena," Hartzog said.

The swimming, gymnastics and baseball teams will be as tough as last year, Hartzog said.

"The coaches in those areas know what it takes to win, and they have the talent to emulate the past success of their teams," Hartzog said. "Plus, they have made several moves to strengthen their team's weak points."

HARTZOG SAID Cornell, the new track coach, has a big job in trying to copy the success of the indoor and outdoor squads.

"In my 27 years of coaching, last year's track teams were the best teams I ever had," said Hartzog, who retired as indoor and outdoor head coach after last season. "But Bill has the coaching ability to get the most out of his team."

Hartzog said that interest in SIU-C sports is at an all-time high.

"We are looking forward to this next season," he said. "It would be unreal if we duplicated last season's performances. The excitement is in trying to emulate that success."

Lack of depth problem for Dorr

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

With the season fast approaching, SIU-C football coach Ray Dorr finds himself confronted with a dual problem concerning his first Saluki squad — a lack of experienced depth and a suspect defensive secondary.

The Salukis are currently laboring through workouts twice a day in preparation for the season opener at Tulsa Sept. 1. The defending National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I-AA National Champions boast a number of bright spots on their 1984 team, but the lack of depth and unproven secondary could hamper the Salukis considerably this fall.

from last year's team, and another seven potential starters have been lost since the end of spring practice because of defection or academic difficulty.

THE MULTIPLE losses have forced Dorr to adjust his depth chart to the point that many freshmen are now slated to see action in 1984. Seventy-eight of the 125 players who reported for fall practice are freshmen or redshirts. Dorr said several freshmen recruits could make the two-deep chart.

THE DEFENSIVE secondary was hit particularly hard by SIU-C football head coach Ray Dorr delivers an inspirational graduation. B.T. Thomas is the only returning starter from a group that accumulated 37 of the Salukis' record-setting 41 interceptions a year ago.

Dorr said he is hoping the trio of sophomore cornerback Tony Jackson, senior cornerback Carl Martin and sophomore free safety John Field will join Dorr in forming an adequate secondary.

DORR SAID senior Keith Davis, freshman Bobby McNabb and walk-on freshman Ira

Davis will combine with Spencer to provide the Salukis with much-needed depth in the

SIU's armchair players to hear more than they see

The SIU-C football team will receive limited television coverage in 1984, but there will still be plenty of local radio coverage to help fill the void.

The recent Supreme Court ruling striking down the NCAA's control of televised college football games has left the Salukis with just two television appearances this season, both on Sportstime, the pay cable station based in St. Louis that is available through Carbondale Cablevision for an additional fee. The Salukis will appear Sept. 1 when they travel to meet four-time defending Missouri Valley Conference champion Tulsa at 3 p.m. On Sept. 8, SIU-C's road game against MVC foe Illinois State will be televised at 11:30 a.m.

Three local radio stations will carry Saluki games this season. WCIL, 1320 AM and 101.5 FM Carbondale, will carry all 11 regular season games. WINI, 1420 AM Murphysboro, will also carry all regular season contests. The SIU-C cable radio station, WIDB, FM 104, will carry all home games and selected road games in 1984.

Sports Dorr, players attempt repeat performance

Big acts are tough to follow — especially when the act goes on the road.

Last year, the Saluki football team did it all. They were the No. 1 team in the NCAA Division I-AA for the last half of the regular season before giving Western Carolina a 43-7 drubbing to become the national champs.

But this year the team will have a new look — new head coach, new quarterback, new receivers and three new faces in the secondary.

Head coach Ray Dorr comes over from the University of Washington with a reputation for offensive creativity. It will be quite a change from old head coach Ray Dempsey's outlook of airtight defenses and strong running attacks.

Duane Crays

Dorr will be working with a new quarterback, Rick Johnson left behind his passing records and took his air show to the United States Football League's Oklahoma Outlaws. But Dorr does have a talented quarterback in senior Darren Dixon.

Last season, Dixon started two games for the Salukis — against Eastern Illinois University and Southeast Missouri State — when Johnson was injured. He moved the offense well enough to generate two victories. Dorr says he isn't worried about Dixon. Dixon has shown a live arm and the ability to mix up his plays.

But one thing that Dixon doesn't have is experienced pass catchers. Last year's starting split end James Stevenson was declared academically ineligible while starting flanker Cecil Ratliff graduated. Dixon will be throwing to the likes of Todd Rotz, converted running back

A flock of new recruits and a set of high goals appear to characterize the upcoming seasons for SIU-C women's athletics.

Seven of 10 women's teams placed third or better in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference last year, but this season will mean rebuilding for many teams. Women's Athletic Director Charlotte West said.

Conference championships were won by the golf and swimming teams, and the gymnastics team took first place in the Gateway Invitational. New golf coach Sonya Stalberger has only two golfers returning to the lineup, but she said she will look for them to provide leadership for seven freshmen recruits and hopefully enable the team to capture the conference crown next spring.

and hope they learn something this fall season, but I can't predict where we'll finish right now," Stalberger said. She said her team has a lot of young talent, energy, and a willingness to work.

A seventh place national ranking may be hard to improve on, but swimming coach Tim Hill believes his team has the potential it needs to better last year's performance.

"We have a very challenging schedule, with seven of our opponents ranked in the top 20, and if we want to improve as a team we'll have to improve individually," Hill said.

WEST PREDICTS another season of strong performances from the gymnastics squad, coached by Herb Vogel. She said Vogel will be leading a "solid group" this season. West said she expects the team to be as competitive as last season, if not better. Last year the SIU-C

Men's athletic teams trying to improve upon very tough act

Last year, the SIU-C men's athletics teams enjoyed what Men's Athletic Director Lew Hartzog called "the greatest year in SIU-C sports history."

But while Hartzog admits "it's hard to follow a no-hitter with a no-hitter," he feels this year's teams will offer more winning and excitement to Carbondale.

Last year, the football Salukis won the NCAA Division I-AA championship and were rated the No. 1 team in the country at that level for the last half of the season.

MEN'S BASKETBALL coach Allen Van Winkle guided his team to its first winning season since the 1978-79 season, while men's cross country coach Bill Cornell won the state championship and missed going to the national finals by one point.

The men's swimming team, coached by Bob Steele, finished 12th in the nation, while Coach Bill Meade guided the men's gymnastics team to a seventh-place national ranking. The Hartzog-led men's indoor track team finished their season ranked ninth and his outdoor squad finished fifth in the country. Richard "Itchy" Jones and the men's baseball team won the Missouri Valley Conference Championship again last year.

SLAs pass out information about SIU-C.

New students greeted by campus community

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

An anticipated 2,300 new and 300 transfer students were welcomed to SIU-C Wednesday by about 150 student life advisers who work with the Student Orientation Program.

These advisers guided new students through five days of scheduled activities designed to introduce the students to the University, its faculty and administrators.

Early Wednesday morning, the SLAs, easily identifiable in maroon T-shirts and white visors, began helping students move into residence halls. Others took parents and students on campus tours. The SLAs took students to McAndrew Stadium on Wednesday for a pre-season look at the Saluki football team, while parents chatted with administrators and attended a reception held by the SIU-C Parents Association.

PARENTS WERE formally welcomed to the University by Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs. Harvey Welch, dean of student life, held a question-and-answer session for parents with Tom Allen, assistant director of student development. Parents also heard presentations on student health programs, and discussed developmental changes they can expect their son or daughter to go through during the first semester of college.

Jim Rudny, whose son is a freshman, thought the "for parents only" sessions were "very informative."

His wife, Sonia, praised the orientation program. "All the SLAs helped immensely, even carrying luggage up, and did everything they could to make it very nice."

THURMAN Brooks, an SLA team captain, said parents commented that the sessions "eased the pain and tension of leaving their students here."

While the parents were meeting with administrators, students met with SLAs in groups of about 15 to 25 people to receive a schedule of orientation activities and ask questions.

Programs scheduled included lectures by professors on studying and test-taking, presentations by Leisure Exploration Services and the Wellness Center, and meetings with administrators. Students also attended the Saluki Fair, where members of campus organizations and departments answered questions and helped them plan free time.

ALSO SCHEDULED were a dance Thursday night at the Student Center, a free concert Friday night featuring "The Misstakes," a performance of Neil Simon's "California Suite" by the Theater Department on Saturday night, and various fraternity and sorority rush activities.

SLAs also helped in informal ways — giving directions or helping students find their way through the bookstore. Their objective was to make the students feel more at ease with the University.

"Orientation is a freshman's first introduction to this University. And the SLA is their first friend, the person that is going to help them become more familiar with the University," said Barb Schook, graduate assistant with the Student Orientation Program.

SLA Jeri Mullins, a junior majoring in public relations, agreed. "They like somebody to turn to," she said.

Mullins and other SLAs said they were tired, but excited after the first day of orientation. "It's new for them (the students) and exciting for us," Mullins said.

Can you act, sing or dance? McLeod wants you

McLeod Theater is searching for people to fill a wide variety of acting, singing and dancing roles for its coming theater season.

Auditions for theater productions will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at McLeod Theater in the Communications Building.

Callbacks will be held at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Roles for men and women are available in the following shows:

— "Lysistrata," an updated version of the ancient Greek comedy which concerns a sex boycott by women in nations at war.

— "The Reception," a fast-paced farce about two bums who crash a church wedding hall and find themselves tangled up with two of the kookiest families who ever tried to marry off their children.

— "The Pirates of Penzance," a swashbuckling operetta about pirates, maidens and the adventure of falling in love. Auditions for this performance will require clothing to move in and a 30-second piece of music to sing.

— "The Member of the Wedding," about a 12-year-old girl who learns that growing up isn't easy.

Roles for as many as 10 girls between ages 6 and 16 will be available at the auditions. The only talent needed for these roles is the ability to hula-hoop.

More information on the auditions is available from the Theater Office, 453-5741.

Crime rate down during summer

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

In most businesses, a drop in production means something is not quite right and is a cause of worry for both the company and the public.

Most businesses, that is, but not in the police business.

Art Wright, spokesman for the Carbondale Police Department, said that "business" was slow for his department this summer because the Carbondale crime rate is noticeably down from last year.

"Things were really slow. Even our burglaries are down from last year," Wright said. "We'd like to think that our Neighborhood Watch Program is partly responsible for the decline."

Neighborhood Watch is a citizens group which was established nationally in the mid-'70s. Its purpose is to organize neighbors into watch groups to make them more aware of crime and to teach them to be alert to suspicious goings-on in their neighborhoods.

Wright said 50 citizens attended an organizational meeting of the program in January — which he helped organize — and the program now includes residents of 13 blocks in the city.

Wright explained that the program encourages people to notify the police when they see suspicious-looking situations, be it at home or elsewhere.

"Wherever they are, we want them to be alert," he said. "We don't want them to get directly involved in the situation themselves, but to give us a call and let us handle it."

Is Neighborhood Watch effective?

"It is so far," Wright said. He cited the example of a Neighborhood Watch block on the southeast side of Carbondale, where in 1983 there were five home burglaries, three auto burglaries, one theft and seven damages to property. So far in 1984, a bicycle theft has been the only reported crime in that neighborhood, he said.

Wright estimates that reported criminal acts throughout the city are down 10 percent to 15 percent from last year.

Recording engineering course set

The School of Music is offering MUS 375, "Recording Engineering," this fall for students interested in learning about and getting hands-on experience in all aspects of modern studio recording.

Henry Romersa, director of the school's commercial music program, said the course will probably meet Saturdays at a time to be announced. Students will travel to Audio Creations studios in Paducah, Ky., where they will work both as studio musicians and recording engineers.

Audio Creations has a 24-track recording system, Romersa said.

Romersa said interested people must have either engineering or music backgrounds. A knowledge of contemporary music performance will be helpful.

Registration for the course will be open Monday. Applications are available from Robert Weiss, assistant to the chairman in the School of Music, Altgeld Hall.

2-car accident on Illinois 13 kills Marion man

A 20-year-old Marion man was killed Wednesday in a two-car accident on Route 13 east of Carbondale.

James F. Thomas was pronounced dead at Carbondale Memorial Hospital at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, about one hour after the pick-up truck in which he was a passenger struck another vehicle while traveling eastbound on Route 13, state police said.

The driver of the truck, Jeff Cralley, 23, of Carbondale, was not hurt. He was ticketed for failure to stop at a stoplight. The other passenger, Juanita Gilman, 20, of Carbondale, was treated for injuries at Memorial Hospital and released. State police said the truck sustained major damage.

Cralley's vehicle struck an automobile driven by Ann Pheimster, 62, of Carbondale, who was traveling north on the Crab Orchard Spillway Road. Pheimster was uninjured.

Push for 'radical' causes hasn't fizzled at SIU-C

By Sarah Rohrs
Staff Writer

The need for some to protest and act on progressive — sometimes labeled radical — causes did not fizzle out with the last wave of '60s and early '70s activism on college campuses.

Concern and forms of action take on new dimension and strategy in the '80s, where the threat to civil rights and the environment, the dangers of nuclear war and the increasing militarization of the Third World are not national trends as they were in the past.

At SIU-C, the Coalition for Change, Leonard Peltier Support Group, Mid-America Peace Project and the Student Environmental Council address these issues and are planning action for the coming year.

COALITION for Change is an umbrella organization with lots of room for involvement, said Eric Buhs.

Buhs said the group's main thrust is toward Latin American issues — trying to change public awareness and policy toward poverty-stricken and war-torn countries.

By understanding the history of the area, Buhs said, the public can realize the complexity of the power structures and how the United States operates within them.

"What we attempt to do is to educate people that the roots of these problems aren't from international communist uprisings," Buhs said.

EVENTS FOR fall semester include showing "When the Mountains Tremble," a movie about Guatemala, in the second or third week of September, and setting up weekly tables in the Student Center to pass out and sell newspapers and other literature on Latin American issues.

Indigenous populations bearing the brunt of violence in Latin American countries are also the concern of the Leonard Peltier Support Group, an Indian civil rights organization with worldwide chapters.

But Chuck Hicklin, a LPSG member, said the main role of the group is to raise public awareness of Leonard Peltier, a leader in the American Indian Movement.

PELTIER, convicted of killing two FBI agents on Pine Ridge Reservation in North Dakota in 1975, was singled out for his political activity, Hicklin said.

Hicklin said that in a broad sense the case demonstrates "how the government has oppressed and ripped off the Indian people."

The LPSG is also active in prisoners' rights and in generating awareness of the lockdown at Marion penitentiary, where Peltier is serving his time pending a retrial.

Events for the coming year include letter-writing campaigns, films, speakers, a concessions stand on Halloween weekend, a monthly newsletter and the continuation of public education on Indian and prison issues, Hicklin said.

NUCLEAR ENERGY created on Indian land, the threat of nuclear war and the proliferation of weapons are the concerns of the Mid-America Peace Project.

MAPP is dedicated to the discussion and debate of nuclear proliferation, war and peace, according to its formal statement of purpose.

MAPP has formally endorsed the freeze movement and works toward "freezing the testing and development of new weapons and freezing the production of existing ones," said group President Randy Kempa, a student in plant and soil science.

MAPP's office is on the third floor of the Student Center and has books, brochures and magazines on war and peace issues, as well as the addresses of more than 3,000 national and grass roots organizations.

MEMBERS ARE working on establishing a spring weekend conference dealing with nuclear war with the theme "What You Can Do For Peace," Kempa said. The group is looking for more members so it can be as effective as possible at the conference, he said.

Fall meetings will be at 7 p.m. every other Monday in Student Center Activity Room D, with films shown in the Orient Room on the alternating Mondays.

The effects of nuclear war on the environment will be addressed by the Student Environmental Council at MAPP's spring conference.

SEC is a 12-year-old organization created during the public debates on environmental issues in the '70s, said John Byron, a student in plant and soil science.

like meat but is more nutritious, Byron said.

THIS YEAR'S activities have the themes "Food, Shelter and the Environment" or "How to Eat Well With Less," Byron said.

The group plans to promote foods using soybeans and will teach people how to cook tofu and tempeh, food that can blend into many dishes and can taste

Other events include an Earth Week Symposium and a whole foods dinner, which were very popular in the past, Byron said. Field trips to Giant City or Crab Orchard are also planned, where members will hike, explore and perhaps have a picnic, he said.

Programs provide for women's needs

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

For women attending SIU-C, chances are that at some point in their school career, they may need to call Women's Services, whether it is for counseling or simply a safe ride home at night.

Many women, however, don't realize what services are available to them. Faculty, students and staff can take advantage of walk-in counseling, support groups, campus safety services, workshops and a resource library.

Women's Services, located at Woody Hall B244, also publishes a newsletter, "Women in Transition," and offers various services for women re-entering college, including an emergency locator service to contact mothers attending classes if there is an emergency with their children.

"If a woman has a problem, we'll do whatever we can to help her," said Laura Davis, administrative counseling assistant. If it doesn't have the resources to help a woman with a problem it will put her in touch with someone who can, she said.

In the past, mostly older re-entry women have taken advantage of Women's Services, Davis said. This semester Women's Services is offering a class especially for those older women, Sociology 101, which is an orientation course dealing with special challenges and barriers that re-entry women face.

"One of the biggest problems is financial aid," said Mary O'Hara, re-entry coordinator. She has detailed information on financial aid opportunities.

However, Davis said that this semester the office would also like to encourage women, 18-20 years old to take advantage of their programs. Davis said younger women don't seem to be as aware of, or as concerned with, women's issues or with rape prevention as older women are.

For this age group the office will be offering a series of workshops in the residence halls. Topics will be "Date Rape," "Rape Victim Prevention" and "Play it Safe" on October 3, 8, and 15 in Lentz Hall. Workshops on "Sexual Harassment on a College Campus," "The Little Girl I Left Behind," and "My Mother, Myself" will be offered Oct. 3, 8, and 15 in Grinnell Hall.

Women's Services will also offer various workshops on campus throughout the semester on topics ranging from women's roles in politics to substance abuse and women. The first workshop on legal services for women, "Gunning for Justice," will be Sept. 5 at 7:00 p.m. in the group room at Evergreen Terrace. Information on times and places for other workshops is available at Women's Services.

Women's Services will also present programs for special groups on request.

It also sponsors on-going support groups with a trained counselor for specific problems. There are groups for assertiveness training, women with bulimia, rape survivors support, lesbian and bisexual group and a women graduate students support group.

Women's Services also offers a divorce support group for both men and women, and a men's support group to help men explore sex roles in society and to help reduce violence in the community, sponsored by Men for Creative Change.

Those interested in the support groups may call Women's Services at 453-3655 to register and obtain information on specific times and meeting places for the groups.

Assistant dean at STC to take new post

SIU-C should strive to develop its own identity and not try to be another Yale or Harvard, says John Sutton, assistant dean of the School of Technical Careers.

Sutton, who will be leaving SIU-C at the end of this month for a position at Colorado State University-Fort Collins, said SIU-C should capitalize on its rural base.

"This University's major strength is its regional identity," Sutton said.

One thing the University has going for it is a close working relationship with the people in the area, Sutton said. In return, the area gets a base of educated workers for its industries and businesses as well as another major industry, the University itself.

Sutton, who has been at SIU-C since 1967, will head the industrial sciences department at Colorado State. Sutton has held several positions in technical careers at SIU-C. Most recently he's been in charge of the degree programs SIU-C conducts on military bases in 12 states.

Along with its regional identity, another strength of SIU-C is its STC program, Sutton said.

There will always be a high demand for STC type programs from low-income students and from students who want programs not offered at local community colleges, Sutton said.

"SIU-C is a very good example of a close relationship between a university and community colleges," Sutton said.

"My experiences at SIU have been good and I feel the school has potential for the future," Sutton said.

But it would be wrong to develop an SIU-C that is a mirror copy of Yale, Sutton added.

"The University needs to develop programs that relate to area industries and businesses, Sutton said.

Jail plans moving right on schedule; site to be named

Plans for a new Jackson County Jail are proceeding according to schedule. A site for the jail will be announced sometime this fall, according to county board member Greg Schefer.

Schefer said that A and H Engineering of Carbondale is analyzing the various sites in Murphysboro proposed as new locations for the jail.

"Right now we're doing soil and percolation (core) tests at the sites," Schefer said. "We should be done with them in about two weeks."

Schefer said that the county is proceeding on the schedule set by the board in July. It estimates that the new jail will be ready for occupation by November 1985.

A survey of the present jail facilities by the National Institute of Corrections soon will be conducted, said Schefer, so the county can determine how many cells it needs in the new jail.

"We'll take our current statistics and make projections as to our future needs," Schefer said. "We can't even think about building until that survey is completed."

Ferraro says criticism of family finances unfair

By Ann Blackman
Of the Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro says the glare of publicity surrounding her husband's finances has put a strain on her family, but she doesn't think the controversy has put Walter F. Mondale's presidential campaign on the defensive.

She said the criticism of husband John Zaccaro's financial matters has been unfair, and that she and Zaccaro each worry about the pressure on each other.

"He feels awful," she said Thursday night in an interview with The Associated Press. "He said to me, 'the only way they can get you is through me.'"

SHE SAID Zaccaro, who was scheduled to undergo a hernia operation Saturday, is distressed at the criticism that has dogged her campaign.

"He's in pain physically and emotionally as well," she said.

Ms. Ferraro said her children have been deeply hurt to see their father's business investigated so publicly.

"They're really feeling it," she said.

And of her own reaction to campaign stress, Ms. Ferraro said:

"I never cry. I knew what I was getting into. I don't react with tears. I can't afford those emotions during this campaign."

Last month Ms. Ferraro announced

she would make a full financial disclosure as required by law, and she added that she would also include her and her husband's tax returns, which she is not required to do.

BEFORE STARTING out on her campaign tour in California, Oregon and Washington, she told reporters in Washington that she made the statement about her husband's tax returns without consulting with him and he later decided the disclosure would compromise his New York real estate dealings.

Criticism about Zaccaro's decision overshadowed Ms. Ferraro's five-day campaign trip to the West Coast, which had been designed to emphasize her positions on crime, problems facing senior citizens, arms control and the environment. At each stop, reporters asked more about her finances than her positions on the issues.

But the New York congresswoman said she doesn't think the controversy surrounding her family's finances has put Mondale on the defensive as he tries to unseat President Reagan.

"HE STILL has to explain his position on defense spending," she said. "My situation will be straightened out in a few days. He has to defend a record of 3.5 years."

In the interview, Ms. Ferraro said she is making a concentrated effort to curb her off-the-cuff remarks.

"Even my jokes end up in print," she said. "Then I have to explain it for two days."

Of the week-long debate "I can't rely on that."

During the five-day trip reporters had two long sessions with her campaign manager, John Sasso, to complain that press traveling with her had little time to question her and that as the trip wound up, some had not even met her.

On the cross-country flight from Seattle to her home in Queens, N.Y., Ms. Ferraro made a point of walking down the aisle and greeting everyone individually.

Ferraro listed as partner in husband's company

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Geraldine A. Ferraro, who has said she doesn't know about or benefit from husband John Zaccaro's real estate business, listed herself last year as half-owner of one of his companies.

In forms filed with the state Insurance Department a year ago and recently made available by department officials, the Democratic vice presidential candidate said she was vice president of P. Zaccaro Co. Inc. In her last two congressional financial disclosure statements, filed in May 1983 and May 1984, she listed her position with the firm as secretary-treasurer.

In her congressional financial disclosure forms, the New York congresswoman has avoided reporting on her husband's business dealings by claiming an exemption to the requirement. The only exemption allowed is when a member knows nothing about and doesn't receive any benefit from the spouse's holdings.

The form filed in Albany — for an insurance broker's license and routinely granted on Nov. 1 — listed John A. Zaccaro and Geraldine A. Zaccaro as the only stockholders of the real-estate management and insurance firm and reported they each owned one share of the company.

Joseph E. Smith, director of licensing services for the department, said that the application form "clearly" required the couple to list all the stockholders and all the stock owned by each.

The form was signed by Zaccaro as president and his wife as vice president.

Asked about the matter, Scott Widmeyer, a spokesman for Ms. Ferraro, said in New York that there would be "a full and complete disclosure on Monday," when Ms. Ferraro has promised to provide the financial information required of a vice presidential nominee. Campaign manager John Sasso told a reporter, "I don't know anything about it."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes was asked Friday whether he had any comment on Ms. Ferraro and the controversy over her finances.

"No," he replied, but quickly added, "I noticed a story this morning in the Philadelphia Inquirer that I might offhandedly call your attention to."

On her congressional financial disclosure forms, Ms. Ferraro listed ownership of one share of stock in P. Zaccaro. The form does not ask for the total number of shares held. She placed the value of the stock at between $5,000 and $15,000.

P. Zaccaro, incorporated by Zaccaro's father in 1935, has managerial involvement in at least 14 properties owned by 14 companies, partnerships and individuals in New York City, according to city property tax records.

Ms. Ferraro has been under pressure concerning her husband's financial dealings and her relationship to his businesses. The couple also owns a large house in an affluent section of Queens and has homes in the Virgin Islands and on Fire Island near New York City.

Two women join ranks of state Jaycees

KNOXVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Judy Rose said she felt important Friday after she and a friend became the first women to join the 17,500-member state Jaycees, a day after the national organization dropped its male-only rule.

"I hope to be a good member and offer some thoughts maybe the men haven't had," said Ms. Rose, 26.

She and Keri Johnson, 25, were inducted into the Knoxville chapter at noon in the local American Legion hall. Both are from Knoxville, a town of 3,000 a few miles southeast of Galesburg.

The chapter president is Hans Block, son of U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block.

But the state Jaycees headquarters in Springfield said Ms. Rose and Ms. Johnson were not the first female Illinois Jaycees.

Notices indicating that two women were inducted into the Greenville chapter were received in Springfield in early July, said a state Jaycees headquarters secretary who declined to identify herself.

She said that because the state and national Jaycees by-laws had barred women before Thursday's action in Oklahoma, the two Greenville women "probably were inducted illegally."

The 64-year-old civic leadership training group's gender barrier began to crumble six weeks ago. The U.S. Supreme Court, citing Minnesota's public accommodations law barring sex discrimination, ruled that the Minnesota Jaycees must admit women.

Three Southern Illinois men convicted for drug distribution

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

Three Southern Illinois men have been convicted for their involvement in a large-scale marijuana distribution operation working from the Carbondale area.

Charles Patterson, 27, Cobden, George Sharos, 28, Fairview Heights, and Larry Liefer, 33, Belleville, were each sentenced to eight-year prison terms on June 29 for their roles as large-scale purchasers and sellers in a marijuana ring which the U.S. Attorney's office believes spans several states.

All have appealed their cases. Tom Coleman, one of the prosecutors in the case, said that Patterson, Sharos and Liefer came under surveillance after marijuana confiscated in Springfield was traced back to them.

"We worked backwards from our seizure in Springfield and found the trail led back to these men," Coleman said.

State and federal investigators said that they discovered the three were working from a farm near Pomona. In early 1981, a nearly 2500-pound load of marijuana was stored at the farm and distributed to other conspirators in the ring, investigators said. A second shipment, containing approximately 5,000 pounds, was brought to the farm shortly after, investigators said.

Patterson, Sharos and Liefer were arrested in March for conspiring to distribute in excess of 1,000 pounds of marijuana, with an estimated value of $230 to $250 per pound.

Michael Carr, another U.S. attorney prosecuting the case, said the bust was the result of a large scale task force investigation involving several agencies, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Drug Enforcement Administration, Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation, Southern Illinois Enforcement Group, and U.S. Attorney's office in East St. Louis.

Safety program is an alternative to walking alone

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

Students need not be afraid to travel across campus at night. The Campus Safety Program, in conjunction with Women's Services, provides a network of safe alternatives to walking alone at night — on or off campus.

Susan Smith, campus safety representative, said that both men and women can use the night safety vans, which are operated by Women's Services. The vans run on two routes Sunday through Thursday, from 7 p.m. to midnight August 20 to October 28, and from 6 p.m. to midnight from October 28 to December 13.

There is no fee for this service. The vans are funded by the Campus Safety Program through the Vice President for Student Affairs Office.

The first van route stops at the Student Center, Trueblood Hall, Southern Hills, the Quad apartments, Wall Street, the Student Recreation Center, Morris Library and Quigley Hall. The second van stops at the Student Center, Morris Library, the Baptist Student Center, the Communications Building, Small Group Housing-Law School, Evergreen Terrace, Thompson Point and the Technology Building.

Campus Safety Program also funds the Women's Transit Service, set up for women living off campus who need transportation to and from on-campus educational activities. The hours for the service are the same as the night safety van. A ride can be arranged by calling 453-2212.

For people who have to walk across campus at night, Smith offered several suggestions to minimize risk. "We don't want anybody to walk alone," she said. "Walk with a friend." Smith also suggested staying out of Thompson Woods and off the Ho Chi Minh Trail, along Route 51, calling it one of the more notorious danger spots on campus.

And she urges students to use the Brightway Path, a lighted path around campus that avoids Thompson Woods. The path, which is marked by bright yellow stickers on light poles, is patrolled by University Police.

A women's self defense class is being sponsored by the Campus Safety Program and the Southern Illinois chapter of the Women's Self Defense Council. Smith said the class will be a victim prevention class, dealing with both the psychological and physical aspects of self defense for women. The purpose of the class is threefold: to teach women how to become aware of potentially dangerous situations, how to avoid physical confrontation when possible, and how to protect themselves when such confrontation is unavoidable.

It will not be a martial arts class, Smith said. Rather, women will be taught a range of basic physical techniques to use against an attacker, including effectively striking an attacker in sensitive areas, such as the groin or eyes.

Two sections of this non-credit class will be offered. The first will meet on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Sept. 8 through Nov. 10. The second session will meet on Tuesdays from 6 to 9 p.m., Sept. 11 through Nov. 13. Registration will be held at the first class meeting, in the Recreation Center, Room 158. A $10 fee must be paid at the time of registration.

Touch of Nature workshop pushes adventure plans

Touch of Nature's Underway Program will sponsor a three-day wilderness adventure workshop for education and human services professionals in September.

The workshop will run from Sept. 5 to 7 at the TON center, 8 miles south of Carbondale. Its purpose, said Joe Stehno, assistant program coordinator, is to acquaint professionals with Underway's wilderness programs, especially the 30-day Spectrum program for adolescents who are having problems in their home, school, community, or other traditional placements.

Since referring such youths to Spectrum is a fairly popular way of trying to help them, the program will give professionals who make the referrals a chance to see what Underway does through first-hand experience, Stehno said.

The program is in two parts — a standard workshop session including presentations and discussions on the theory, techniques, effects, and special issues concerning wilderness programming; and an optional hiking, canoeing and overnight camping outing in the woods surrounding Little Grassy Lake.

The cost for both the workshop and the outing is $42. The fee for the workshop alone is $30. Interested people may phone Touch of Nature at 529-4161.

Farmer's market given try in M'boro

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

Murphysboro residents who saw having a weekly farmer's market as a possible solution to a dying business district have put that plan into action.

Hilda V. Born, market manager, said she proposed a market at a town meeting in May. The first of the weekly markets was held Aug. 3.

"The town was dying, and we needed something to bring it back alive. We had a market four or five years ago, but it was in an out-of-the-way place. I said we needed one in the downtown area," Born said.

Through the end of October, the market will be open Fridays from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the corner of 13th and Walnut Streets, Born said.

"We're trying it out, to see if there is a need for a market in Murphysboro. I'd like it to go over," she said.

The market has about five produce growers who sell their produce weekly, she said. Other growers are being contacted to come, she said.

"The prices are competitive with the markets in Anna and Carbondale, and the city isn't charging any fees for the space," Born said.

The market has had a good response, so far, she said. "There's always four or five people milling around."

Arlene Miller, a customer at the market, said she had been there twice. "The quality is good, and the prices are good," she said.

The market in Murphysboro is smaller than the markets in Carbondale, she said, but the prices and quality of the produce are just as good.

Frances Svec, another customer, said she thought the market was fabulous. "It's right in the community, it's good, and we need it. We used to go to the market in Carbondale, but we're going to start going here instead. The quality and prices here are good," she said.

George Born, who described himself as "one of the people who's trying to get this thing going," said business for the market has been increasing. "Things like this take a little time. We're getting more growers every week," he said.

Charles Neighbors said he was selling his produce at the market for the first time. Neighbors said he also sells his peaches and nectarines at the Carbondale market, and will be back in Murphysboro next week "if business is all right."

Bonnie Newcomb, another produce grower, was also at the Murphysboro market for the first time, and she also goes to the markets in both Carbondale and Anna. "I enjoy doing things like this," she said.

Elizabeth Davitz, who sells kitchen knives and produce at the market, said business has been pretty good. She only sells at the Murphysboro market, because "it's home," she said.

Ted Ruble, another produce grower, said he sold his goods at the Murphysboro market each week it has been open. Business has been picking up since the market started, he said.

The town has had a good response to the market, Hilda Born said.

"So far, everybody has had good reports, good remarks. The merchants are happy, the customers are happy," she said.

New control tower open at SI Airport

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

Southern Illinois Airport's new 63-foot air traffic control tower officially opened Friday, and the airport's air traffic manager said he thought it would serve as a model for future towers.

Eugene J. Hall said that for one of the smallest airports in the country, the new tower contains the most modern state-of-the-art equipment and was built to withstand earthquakes.

Hall said that perhaps the greatest difference between the new tower and the older, temporary tower is the newer one's greater capacity to train air traffic controllers.

"Room to train people was a problem," Hall said. The older tower's limited space allowed for only one person to undergo training at a time, Hall said. The new tower can accommodate two on-duty air traffic controllers plus up to three trainees.

Hall said that the air traffic controllers job will be made easier by the new tower. The tower is now away from the runway and above the aircraft during take-offs and landings, giving the controllers better depth perception.

"I can't say that it is any safer than the older one because there were no accidents," Hall said.

James Lichlyter, area supervisor for the Federal Aviation Administration who was at the opening, said that because the Southern Illinois Airport is relatively small, the new tower doesn't have radar. Instead it uses visual separation and instrument applied control. Lichlyter said that during low visibility the instrument control function is aided by sensitive instruments in the Kansas City, Mo., control center.

Lichlyter said that radar is necessary in high-density traffic areas, but that the new tower has no "blind spots." He said that unless there is a much greater increase in air traffic, radar won't need to be installed.

Planning for the tower began in 1969 and actual ground breaking began Aug. 14, 1983.

Missouri kicks up dirt in new conservation try

WASHINGTON (AP) — When heavy rainfall saturated parts of the Midwest in late spring, up to 300 tons of soil washed away during a single storm in some sections of Missouri.

"Under normal situations, it's considered a disaster if you lose that in 10 years," says Fred Lafser, director of the Missouri Department of Natural Resources.

But Lafser and agricultural and conservation officials nationwide say Missouri has launched a precedent-setting offensive in the fight against soil erosion, considered by many as one of the nation's most serious environmental problems.

In the words of one conservationist, Missouri residents "put their money where their mouth is."

Specifically, Missouri voters approved a $30.5 million sales tax increase with the revenue to be divided equally between soil and water conservation and state parks.

"It's significant that they found an innovative way to fund soil conservation. They are pioneers," said Edward Thompson Jr., counsel for the American Farmland Trust, a Washington-based conservation group.

"It's definitely a precedent. Nobody has taken the step of earmarking money to go to soil and water conservation like Missouri," says Peter Meyers, chief of the U.S. Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service. "I expect we will see a few other states try this."

The one-tenth of a cent tax increase, which takes effect in July 1985 and will expire automatically five years later, is the first statewide tax dedicated to soil and water conservation programs, according to Eugene Lamb, state programs specialist for the National Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts.

"We consider it quite significant," says Lamb. "We're seeing public support for soil and water conservation."

For the most part, states divert a share of their general tax revenues to conservation projects and combine it with federal money.

"I think we kind of surprised the country," says Lafser. "We immediately had a number of calls from other Midwestern states with similar problems that wanted to know how we did it."

Most of the sales tax revenue will be used for cost-sharing and loan programs to help farmers build terraces, grassed waterways and watershed projects. Some money will go for technical assistance to advise producers of new conservation techniques such as no-till farming.

Missouri now spends about $10 million a year on conservation programs.

counting, said he felt "really exhausted," but that "the motivation, the excitement, and the compliments we're getting from the new students and the parents just makes it all worthwhile."

Brooks and Mullins, along with the other SLAs, were selected after going through an evaluation process designed by the Student Orientation Program staff and Learning Resources Services. They arrived in Carbondale the second week in August and spent the first five days learning more about the University. They received instruction in holding group meetings and dealing with new students, and in general, becoming good representatives of the University.

Orientation concluded with the Watermelonfest Sunday evening at the campus boat docks, with WIDB Radio providing music and watermelon and the Alumni Association, Student Programming Council and the Student Center supplying other snacks.

Microwaves, cancer linked in study of rats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Glandular changes and a higher rate of cancer were found among laboratory rats chronically exposed to low-intensity microwaves, a study by University of Washington researchers said.

Results emerging from the $4.5 million study sponsored by the Air Force prompted substantial concern among researchers investigating the biological and health effects of non-ionizing radiation, according to Microwave News, a specialized scientific newsletter.

"In addition to a general increase in cancer incidence, the experimental results suggest that microwave exposure is responsible for wide-ranging effects related to the adrenal glands and the entire endocrine system," the publication reported.

The adrenal glands, adjacent to the kidneys, and other glands of the endocrine system produce chemical hormones vital to the regulation of many bodily functions.

The Microwave News account noted that the findings could provide an experimental basis for widely reported complaints of headaches, dizziness, memory loss and fatigue from workers chronically exposed to microwave radiation.
